CLASSICAL ARCHAEOLOGY

Join the Friends of the Museum of Classical Archaeology

The Museum of Classical Archaeology is the only institution in South Australia devoted entirely to the archaeology of the Old World. It displays art and artefacts from Mesopotamia and Egypt through to Greece, Etruria, Rome, and Byzantium.

A registered charity, the Museum is located in the lower ground floor of the historic Mitchell Building at The University of Adelaide, next to the Art Gallery, and is part of the North Terrace "Cultural Boulevard".

Whilst the Museum is currently closed to the general public, you can still visit if you book in advance as a group. We also provide school tours and study sheets, a free authentication and identification service for anyone wishing to know more about an antique object in their possession, advice about prospective tax deductible donations of artefacts, and information about classical and archaeology courses.

The Friends of the Museum of Classical Archaeology organise public lectures each year, inviting international scholars to speak on all aspects of Greek and Roman archaeology. The Museum is specially opened for the Friends to look closer at the collection. Friends receive newsletters and special opportunities throughout the year, and are kept informed of all things classical in Adelaide. Membership fees help to cover the costs of bringing guest lecturers to Adelaide, and to promote the Museum. They also provide funding for acquisitions, and the conservation and maintenance of the rich variety of artefacts already within the Museum.

To gain a deeper insight into the ancient world, and to contribute to this small but unique gem in South Australia's cultural heritage, join the Friends of the Museum of Classical Archaeology!
